

Proposal Writing Resources from the Office of Proposal Development at Texas A & M

The Office of Proposal Development (OPD) at Texas A & M has prepared a website to assist faculty in the development and writing of research and educational proposals to federal agencies and foundations. Below is a summary of web pages that may be of particular use for NMHU faculty.

Grant Writing Workshop. The OPD at Texas A & M has prepared a comprehensive workbook, "The Craft of Grant Writing", to assist investigators in writing grants. This valuable workbook covers every phase of the proposal preparation process. In addition to the workbook, a number of toolkits for investigators are available for use in the proposal process.

Proposal Resources . OPD at Texas A & M offers a wealth of information relating to preparation of proposals, including presentations and tutorials from funding agencies, articles with helpful information on writing a project evaluation and assessment resources, understanding the proposal review process, and several guides from other universities on crafting a successful proposal.

Funding Opportunities. OPD at Texas A & M maintains a comprehensive list of funding opportunities available for investigators. You can access the most recent opportunities (for the current month) here as well as archives of previous months. A list of funding opportunities by category is also available on this web page.

Resources for Junior Faculty. OPD offers a New Faculty Research Starter Kit and websites on grant writing and programs for late postdoctoral investigators and/or new faculty.