    c. Process should include some basic questions, and then have the program attach any other documentation such as their strategic plan, evaluations, etc.

Title changes, course descriptions, and pre-requisites fall under revisions, so they need to be approved. The catalog description does not need to be approved.
    d. The catalog is tied to Degree Audit. Students have to apply to fall under a new catalog.

13. Clarification and communication of policies
    a. Double dipping – can the same course count for two majors or minor? Dr. Woodford-Gormley remembered that up to a certain number could be used. Michael Raine will investigate what the current practice is.
    b. When do catalog changes go into effect? It used to be when a new catalog is published. Now, changes can go into effect the next semester, being sure to inform students.
c. Conflict between degree audit and transcript. Degree audit is a tool. The transcript is the official record. The two should be looked at together.
