The Western Regional Graduate Program (WRGP) is a program through which Graduate students in nineteen participating states and territories may enroll in designated two-year and four-year institutions, as well as programs in other participating states at a special, reduced tuition level application only to WRGP students at a rate of a hundred and fifty percent of in-state tuition. In all programs, the sum is substantially less than non-resident tuition. To receive the WRGP tuition benefits, students do not need to demonstrate financial need.

States and territories participating in WRGP are Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Guam, and the Republic of Marshall Islands. WRGP is coordinated by the Western Interstate Commissions for Higher Education (WICHE) a regional agency created by western states in the early 1950's.
